treated here, there are no problems for women; this is America and we love the way we're treated; and any woman who says she has a problem is crazy. Yeah, then let me open your pocketbook and let me look on your marriage license and see who you got taking care of you. You get out there and face the reality of this world, and then let me hear you talk in such a calm, accepting manner. You'll be given benefits just like the slaves who turned against the other slaves were given a little bit more, but they still were slaves, they still were treated as though they were owned, and they behaved like those who are owned. We need to do better in this Legislature than we do. Will we? Probably not. And I can't make anybody do anything, but sometimes I can make us a bit uncomfortable, and sometimes I can embarrass us. Now how would you all feel if, when we had this ceremony for the dead, Jesus said, let the dead bury the dead. But see, when the reality comes to confront us, then we change all of that. We do differently, and we enter the forms and ceremonies and the rituals, and we pretend to be so wounded of spirit, so broken in heart and so distressed that one person has died, a person we knew. But there are people dying every day, and we don't care about them; we don't care about their families; we don't care about those broken hearts. But here the form and the ceremony are what are expected, so we go through that which is expected. Then next week, or the week after, or whenever Senator Schimek's bill...

SENATOR SCHIMEK: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...comes up again, we're going to have to go through those same gyrations. And I will watch and I will listen. I'm not going to intrude on you-all's festivities this afternoon. When we re...when we adjourn, I'm out of here. So you don't have to worry about me getting carried away and using this as a forum to say some things that really need to be said. I will do that during our usual proceedings. But, Senator Preister, there is no way I'm going to vote against your bill, I think you know that. But when opportunities present themselves, I must take advantage of them. And when I croak, I don't want a one of you to talk about what a good guy I was, or how hard I tried, or anything else, none of that. Because if there is such a thing as a "hain't comin' back to get 'cha, by God, or the devil," I'll come back and "get cha".
